

Honolua and Mokulela Bays are both within the Honolua-Mokuleia Conservation District. Honolua Bay (Slaughterhouse) is also a popular surf spot when the surf is up. Driving past here you will be getting out of the wind protection of the island, and experience the full force of our Pacific Ocean tradewinds

It is not uncommon for light showers to be falling in the morning from Kapalua down to Ka'anapali, primarily during the winter months. Skies should be clear.

OCEAN SAFETY WARNING
- Before entering the ocean, look for any occurances of large-than-normal waves that could knock you down
- Don't dive into unfamiliar waters, rocks ae common on the ocean floor
- Inquire about any unknown conditions in and around the ocean if you're unsure
- When in doubt, don't go out! Your safety is your responsibility.

Maui Pono is the company converting Maui's old sugar fields in central Maui into agricultural production and uses.

All the tilled fields you see in central Maui use to have sugar cane growing on it

The 41,000 acres of abandoned sugar fields in central Maui are going to be used for the production of food crops. This is historic and huge for Maui and its future. You can see the fields being tilled

Maui's first airport was built at Ma'alaea in 1930. It was moved to this site in 1938. When the U.S. went to war with Japan, a larger airport was built at its current site in Kahului. Cement bunkers can be seen around this area. They were manned to spot approaching enemy aircraft, an event that never happened

The hawaiian word for water is wai. It was the most important resource fo the Hawaiian people, and you can see the wod used in many of the place names in Hawai'i. The Hawaiian valued it so much that the word for wealth in hawaiian is waiwai. It is only recently that western man has begun to realize its value, something the Hawaiian knew nearly 1,000 years ago

Kahikinui Hawaiian Home

Hawaiians believed the earth was a living and conscious being, to be cared for as an ancestor. Because of this, Hawaiians are kahu (caretakers) of the land. They do not dominate it or own it. The Hawaiian takes cae of the 'aina (land) and the 'aina takes care of the Hawaiian. This balance is called pono: being in righteous harmony with one's self and the environment. And all this is possible because of akua (god), the supreme being from which all things come.

The state motto is Ua mau ke ea o ka 'aina i ka pono
The life of the land is perpetuated in righteousness

Note: There is no way to drive from Route 31 in 'Ulupalakua down to Wailea. This road was closed in the 1980's to build the golf couses in Wailea

This road becomes unpaved lava rock, not leading anywhere

Walking trail leading to the bay. Bay can become dangerous when rough

The road along this south side of Maui continues past Kipahulu all the way to 'Ulapalakula. Because there is a five-mile section that is unpaved, rental car companies don't want their cars driven through here. And because it is total isolation out here, if you have car trouble you are on you own. Dive at your own risk

Unpaved road

The Hawaiian Islands are a series of volcanos rising from the ocean floor. Science tells us they are being formed by molten lava being emitted through holes in tectonic plates that are slowly moving in the direction of Japan; Hawaiian legend tells us the islands were created by Madame Pele.

The island of Maui is made of two volcanos. The larger volcano is 10,023 foot-high Haleakalā, which means house of the sun; the smalle one is 5,788 foot-high Halemahina, meaning house of the moon. Over time erosion from wind and rain has created the isthmus between them.

Each island has a nickname. Maui's nickname is The Valley Isle, for the 8 valleys around Halemahina. 'Iao Valley is the most sacred and historic

Entering Hana, stay on the Hana Highway to continue on to Haleakala National Park at Kipahulu, or turn left onto Uakea Road to drive to Hana

Sea turtles, monk seals, dolphins and whales are wild animals and protected under state and federal laws.

Responsible Viewing -
- View from a distance. Use binoculars or your camera's zoom for a close up.
- Do not disturb sea turtles or monk seals sleeping on the beach.
- Never touch, chase, or feed. Animals are wild, unpredictable and protected.
- Limit viewing time to a few minutes.
- Never swim with spinner dolphins — they rest and nurture their young during the day.
- View dolphins and whales from a boat or from shore.

Viewing Distances -
- Sea turtles: View from at least 10 feet (3 meters) – on land and in water.
- Hawaiian monk seals: Stay behind any signs or barriers. Stay back 50 feet (15 meters), if no barrier.
- Dolphins: Stay back at least 50 yards (45 meters).
- Humpback whales: Do not approach within 100 yards – federal law.

REEF-SAFE SUNSCREEN
In 2018, Hawai'i became the fist U.S. state to ban the sale of sunscreens containing oxybenzone and ocinoxate, two chemicals harmful to aquatic life. Unfortunately, the term "reeffriendly" is not regulated. Check labels to help protect our reefs. Visit savethereef.org for complete information.
